A.H.S. Library Club Sponsors Book Fair

"Christmas comes but once a year," and book fairs come even less often. This year will bring a book fair you'll certainly want to see.

A book fair? Yes, a sale of some hardbound and many paperbound books priced to fit your Christmas budget. These books will make excellent gifts for family and friends. However, if you bought all your gifts last July, you will enjoy buying some of these intriguing titles for yourself. During Christmas vacation indulge in reading novels, plays, science stories, romances, and biographies.

Sponsored by the John Adams Library Club, this stimulating book fair will be held in the library Wednesday, December 6, thru Friday, December 8. You may come to the library to browse among the many interesting books before and after school as well as during your study hall.

The wide range of titles offers you books for gifts, books for learning, and books for just plain entertainment. This book fair promises to be one of the best events of the school year.

Seniors Offered Many Scholarships

This is the first of a series of five articles on scholarships available to Adams seniors.

For the college-bound senior, one of the most important considerations in the choice of a college is that of finance. His parents' ability or inability to provide the funds necessary for his higher education will often determine whether he attends Northwestern University or I.U. Extension; indeed, it often determines whether he will attend college at all. For seniors to whom finance is of prime importance, there is one word which should become as familiar to the students as their own names. That word is scholarships.

Many Different Scholarships

Scholarships come in various forms and sizes. They range all the way from one hundred dollars to full tuition. Some schools provide extensive scholarship programs for their freshman classes; others offer only small scholarships to the first-year students. Some scholarships are renewable; others are valid for only one year. Frequently, an initial small scholarship will be replaced by a much larger one if the student maintains above-average grades.

Regardless of the nature of any scholarships, however, one thing is certain. The scholarship, no matter how small or large, will not be brought to the student on a silver platter. The senior desiring a scholarship or scholarships must sell himself to the organization offering the financial aid. Sitting back and hoping for a scholarship has never been known to produce one.

Should Plan Search for Aid

Seniors in need of financial aid should follow a definite plan in their search for suitable scholarships. First, decide how large a scholarship is necessary. Second, visit the College Conference Room to learn of the scholarships available. The bulletin board at the north end of the room is presently covered with folders and posters describing every kind of scholarship imaginable. Study the information carefully; don't forget to look through the catalogues of the colleges you are considering. Third, decide which scholarships will give you enough aid to enable you to attend the college of your choice. A one hundred dollar scholarship would not by itself be enough for a student whose parents can provide no funds at all.

Fourth, be sure that you are eligible for the scholarship. It is ridiculous to consider the scholar-

1961 Christmas Seal Drive Sponsored By Adams Club

The 1961 Christmas Seal Drive at John Adams is a perfect example of a joint effort project. Participating in the week-long drive will be the Junior TB League of South Bend, the Future Nurses of America, the Hi-Y, and Mr. William Brady's speech classes.

Sale Begins December 4

Representatives will be chosen from each home room for the sale, which starts December 4. It will be the responsibility of each representative to collect the money, give out the seals, and turn in the money collected at the end of each day.

The problems of distribution of seals, collection of money from homeroom representatives, and the general plans for the drive lie in the hands of the Junior TB League of South Bend and the Future Nurses Club. Louise Wiseman, a junior, and Don Ansley, a senior, are the Adams representatives of the Junior TB League. The Future Nurses are headed by Susan Berfanger, president.

Clubs to Cooperate

The responsibility of boosting the students' enthusiasm for the drive will be fulfilled by the Hi-Y and Mr. Brady's speech classes. The Hi-Y promises to come up with a plan to raise the zeal of the student body. Speculation is that the plan will probably be a mail system in which members of the Hi-Y will deliver Christmas cards to any home room providing that the card is accompanied by a Christmas Seal. Mr. Brady's speech classes will split up and give speeches in each classroom. Besides promoting the Christmas Seal Drive, the students will be gaining practice in public speaking.

Adams is thereby united in its efforts concerning the 1961 Christmas Seal Drive. Even if you are taking no active part in promoting the drive, you can nevertheless play a very important role. Purchase Christmas Seals from your home room representative, and you will be contributing as much to the success of the drive as any member of the Junior TB League, the Future Nurses, the Hi-Y, or a speech class.

PROBABLY A NUMBER OF CAUSES FOR LACK OF MINOR SPORTS SUPPORT

It seems self-evident that the minor sports are inadequately supported. Six sports here in our school are sparsely attended except by those who have some immediate interest in them: cross-country, tennis, wrestling, swimming, track, and golf. We wonder if greater interest in these sports might help those teams to win more.

There are several reasons why student following of these sports is low. First, students here at John Adams are exceptionally busy with studying and would hardly be able to attend more than one sporting event a day, yet Wednesday before last, a swimming meet, a wrestling meet, and a basketball game were scheduled on the same day. Next, we must realize that these sports are minor sports and so have less publicity, not only in our own school, but in the whole country.

And last, we have noticed that those who should be taking the lead in school spirit simply aren't interested in these sports. One rarely sees a football player at a winter swim meet, for example. Few members of the basketball team have seen an Adams tennis match. In fact, instead of leading school spirit in general, our monogram boys seem to be trying their best to be blasé: they swagger or stumble up to get their athletic awards in the assemblies, and the boys who were to represent football teams in the Monogram Club's assembly stood out on the floor looking so bored that students wondered if they should cheer or follow the example in front of them.

We feel, then, that if sports events could be scheduled so that student attendance would be easier, if more publicity were given to the minor sports, and if those in a position of leadership would show an interest in them, minor sports at Adams would probably get more much-needed support.

One participant in minor sports told us: "It is impossible for everyone to attend all minor sports activities. On the other hand, it is not impossible for everyone to take in an occasional meet or game of these sports. True school spirit is unity. Unity does not include just the major sports, but the minor sports as well."

Winter Driving Requires Special Rules And Care

Driving takes caution and alertness any time of year but with the coming of winter it is necessary to observe some special rules for driving on icy and snowy roads.

Always drive slowly. Watch shady spots and bridges where ice and snow doesn't melt so quickly.

Don't follow too closely. Your car may skid into the car in front of you if you don't allow enough room for stopping.

If you skid, don't move your foot quickly from the accelerator to the brake. You want the wheels to start turning again. With the car still in gear, quickly but gradually turn in the direction in which the car is skidding. But not too far—or you'll throw the car into an opposite skid.

Always use the defroster if your windows become steamed. Also, be sure to scrape the ice off the outside glass before driving the car.

It is a good idea to carry a snow shovel, sand, or newspapers in the trunk in case you get stuck.

Above all, use caution and common sense in winter driving.

BASKETBALL SEASON TICKET SALE WILL COME TO A CLOSE TODAY

Mr. Richard Zook, ticket manager, has announced that the sale of season basketball tickets will end today. At last count, approximately six hundred student tickets and two hundred adult tickets had been purchased.

For the first week of the sale, students were able to purchase their tickets through home room representatives. For the last week, however, the tickets have been sold before and after school at Ticket Booth A.

Students may still purchase tickets tonight at the ticket booth. Since only one-third of the students enrolled at Adams have purchased tickets, it seems likely that there might be a rather large crowd at the booth tonight. If you don't already have your ticket, be sure to purchase it after school today. It's one of the best ways to support the team and your school.

Adams Building Designed By Harold Maurer For Patriotic And Practical Reasons

John Adams High School, built in 1939, was designed to carry out a patriotic motif. The emblem is the same eagle that was chosen as the emblem of the United States in 1782 to symbolize might and power. We see the Adams eagle on the school jewelry, and hear it in the names of our teams, EAGLES, BEAGLES, and SEAGLES. The school colors, red and blue, also came from an attempt to bolster patriotism in 1939 at the beginning of World War II.

The name of the school, that also reflects back to early American history, was suggested by Mr. Leonard Harwood, a member of the school board at that time, and an authority on the lives of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams. During their political careers, these two men were bitter rivals, each trying his best to run the country as he thought best. But after they retired from public life, they became steadfast friends until the day they both died, July 4, 1826, fifty years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Since Thomas Jefferson School was nearby, Mr. Harwood thought it would be appropriate to name ours John Adams, to commemorate the two men's friendship.

Harold Maurer Architect

The Adams building was the first major building erected after the depression. Although it was a larger school than most and was built of relatively new materials, like other schools it was forced to make a choice between an auditorium and a gymnasium. Mr. Harold Maurer overcame this restriction by designing a combination of the two. The 3,200 seats in the gym were divided into sections to produce the atmosphere of a theater. Yet when it is to be used as a gym, the stage can be closed off and bleachers pulled out from the wall for greater seating capacity.

The original building contained the combination gym and auditorium, twelve classrooms, special science rooms, a library, and administrative offices. It was the largest school in this part of the country and the only one with a gym plus an auditorium, and it was among the first schools to have contemporary design. The library and administrative offices were built in the center of the building for convenience and efficiency. In the years immediately after Adams was built, visitors came from surrounding states to see this large, modern school building.

In addition to practical planning, Mr. Maurer used ingenuity to make Adams an attractive, well-balanced structure. The immense gymnasium-auditorium caused a problem by seeming to unbalance the structure, but Mr. Maurer made the main entrance wide and ornate and added the tower to promote the building as a whole and detract from the size of the gym. The "mysterious" tower has four floors. Two of these are used at teachers' lounges, and the top floor is presently occupied by the electronics club.

Design from Helsinki, Finland

Part of the design of the building was adopted from an interesting old railroad station in Helsinki, Finland, designed by the world famous architect, Eelii Saarinen (see photograph). In travelling Mr. Maurer had seen the old building, and was pleased by the pillars topped by statues. He incorporated the same pillar design along the Mishawaka Avenue side of the school, substituting the eagle emblem for the statues in the photograph.

Since the original construction of Adams in 1939, two additions have been made to the school. In 1952, the north wing was added, and the rooms behind that stage (exercise room, rooms 21, 22, 31, 32, etc.) In 1959, Mr. Maurer was again the architect for Adams when he designed the east wing that closed the school into a quadrangle.

Looking now into the future, it is hoped that John Adams will continue to grow to accommodate more students and provide better facilities.

What Girls Carry in Their Purses

Almost everyone is familiar with the old adage about how much boys are supposed to carry in their pockets. Well, I've found the same to be true as far as girls' purses are concerned! One would be absolutely amazed at the variety of stuff (I'm not saying junk, notice) we of the fairer sex manage to cram into our purses.

Aside from the basic, absolute necessities (lipsticks, billfolds, combs, Kleenex, keys, pencils, paper, pens, handkerchiefs, mirrors, erasers, and compacts), many girls carry these things around every day and consider them just as important as the aforementioned items: cough drops, nose drops and inhalers, bandages, sewing kits, aspirin, nail polish (with or without a top), emery boards and nail files, plastic rain hats, perfume, ink, manicure sets, address books (My, aren't we clever! Who would guess that we could shove all this into our average-sized purses!) Besides all these, we also make it a practice to carry books (all shapes and sizes), ticket stubs, charge plates, newspaper articles, calendars, bank books, stamps, admits (blank, of course!), class notes, string, and sunglasses—all in our purses!

And so for the mediocre. Among the more original things we tote around are socks, eyebrow pencils, pocket skate sharpeners, eye droppers, broken shoe laces, eyelash curlers, scissors, razor blades, playing cards, Fritos, shoehorn, recipes, and a can opener or two. But wait! Here are a few more. Onion skins, leaves, staplers, broken dress zippers, sucaryl, snagged nylons, four leafed clovers, buttons, and compasses. We also tote threaded bobbins, charms, good luck pieces, hair spray, hand lotion, cold cream, cuticle removers, pressed orchids, and contact lenses! Quite an assortment, no?

As one might guess (or would one?), there are many, many, many more items I've been unable to list, but I think you get the general idea—that girls really are more ingenious than boys when it comes to originality of content. (Something we knew all along, anyhow!)

"Waiter, There's A Fly in My Soup"

"That's all right, mister, he won't drink much."

"Sh-h, not so loud, the other customers will want one."

"Hm-mm—there were two of them when I left the kitchen."

"I know, watch the cute little rascal dive for parsley."

"Oh, fudge! I mixed the orders again."

"Go ahead and eat him, there's more where that came from."

"Wring him out before you throw him away."

"Half a fly would be worse."

"You want I should dive in and keep him company?"

"Serves the chef right. I told him not to strain the fat through the fly swatter."

"What do you want me to do, beat him to death with my carnation?"

"If you wanted it with your desert, why didn't you say so."

"What do you want for thirty-five cents—maybe an elephant?"

"That's all right, he's dead."

"When you finish that one you can have another."

"All right, I'll give you separate checks."

"Don't throw a fit, I'll run and get a frog."

By the way, why is everybody saying, "I can't believe..."

I heard Mr. Truex say that he doesn't care if we chew gum in class, as long as we don't blow bubbles with it.

I heard that Terry Bolling is recognized as the inventor of "manganese."

I heard Doug May say that he still doesn't believe Chaucer meant "serenaded" by "loved so hotly."

Some Adamsites who attended the Central production, "Land of Smiles" said that not a member of the chorus cracked a smile.

I heard Jim Swedeen say that he is looking for people to help him in his "attack" against the commercialization of Christmas.

Eric Svendsen said, "The hypotenuse is that side of a right triangle that goes 'skooshing' out as the 'ordinate' decreases and the 'abscissa' increases."

Moonlight, Music

... and YOU are the sum total of a charming and enchanting Christmas season. The soft moonlight shining on the drifting snow, the gentle strains of music flowing through the ballroom create an enticing atmosphere for YOUR irresistibility.

The newly fallen snow contrasts with the bright flame colors of any gown: vermilion, persimmon, spice, glowing pink, flawless white, mint, and sophisticated black.

Flatter your figure with a multitude of available shapes and materials. For the free and easy fit, choose bell-shaped, flared, low-waisted, or two-piece. For those non-twisters, sheaths and full-length gowns enhance your loveliness. In addition to the usual, beaded fabrics, fuzzy mohairs have proved to be the most popular.

Personal taste and the type of dress best determine the need for accessories. A simple pin may be sufficient for one, while another may require a necklace. To be the belle of the ball, know when you have adorned your gown sufficiently.

Eagles Seek Victories Over Clay, Terre Haute

EAGLES VICTORIOUS OVER LEW WALLACE

The Adams' Eagles under Coach Warren Seaborg started off on the right foot by defeating the Hornets of Gary Lew Wallace 74-65, on November 22.

The Eagles tallied 46 points in the first half and never trailed from that point on. The Lew Wallace team led only once in the entire game. In the first six seconds of play Svihra of Lew Wallace hit to put the Hornets in front 2-0.

Being down by a 2-0 count, the Eagles quickly took the lead 7-2 with Sam Williams scoring all 7 points. The Eagles sizzled to margins of 13-3, 18-4, 22-8 at the quarter and 30-10 early in the second period. It was 65-42 at the end of the third quarter.

With most of Seaborg's first stringers on the bench in the fourth quarter, the Hornets outscored the Eagles 23-9, but the 9-point difference was as close as the Hornets ever came.

Bill Helkie and Sam Williams accounted for 41 of the Eagles 74 points. Sam hit 6 baskets and 3 free throws while Helkie hit 12 baskets and 2 free throws.

Beagles Win Over Lew Wallace 48-33

The John Adams B-team, led by the sharp shooting of Don Schultz, crushed Gary Lew Wallace November 22 by a score of 48-33.

Schultz led the scoring attack with seven field goals for 14 points. Jim Anderson and Joe Fleming were next for the winning Eagles, with Anderson scoring 11 points and Fleming 7 points. Anderson scored only two field goals but managed 7 points from the charity stripe.

From the opening buzzer to the finish, Gary Lew Wallace was no match for the rebounding and sharp shooting of the host Eagles.

Freshmen Crush Michigan City

The John Adams freshmen team opened the 1961-62 season with a decisive victory over Michigan City Barker 49-31.

The Eagles' rebounding was led by Bradley who also lumped in four points from the floor. The team's top scorer was Vic Butch who collected seven field goals and a free shot for 15 points. Daryl tallied 11 points and Tim Hostrowser 10 for the winners.

Trailing by two at the first quarter, the Eagles pushed their margin to 14 by the half time and to 18 at the third quarter, before coasting home.

Coach Don Truex is looking forward to the coming season with what looks like an evenly-balanced scoring attack.

Tankers Bow to Penn

The Seagles suffered a disappointing defeat in their second meet against Penn Township, with a one-point loss. The victory was decided in the medley relay when Penn touched out Adams by one-tenth of a second.

The record for the Seagles' season now stands at one win and one loss. The meet tonight against Riley is one of the most important dual meets of the season.

Visit Clay Tonight; Face Cats Saturday

Tonight the Adams cagers take to the road as they travel to play the Washington Clay Colonials. In grabbing their third straight victory of the 1960-61 season, the Eagles trounced the Colonials 71-55.

The Eagles had to come from behind to defeat the Colonials in their last meeting. Warren Seaborg's Eagles held an 18-12 lead after the first quarter, but could tally only eleven points during the second stanza and trailed at half time by a score of 31-29. The Eagles came back in the second half and moved to a 62-38 lead going into the final minutes of play.

Then on Saturday, the Eagles return home to face the Black Cats of Terre Haute Gerstmeyer who defeated them last year by a 52-46 margin.

The cagers outscored the Cats from the field in last year's contest, but made too many mistakes and not enough free throws as they suffered their initial defeat of the 1960-61 campaign.
